The boundary prognostic variables and w, P, condition (12) implies that the lake surface is not a free surface but rather With this rigid lid a balanced surface where the vertical velocity is null. approximation (Bryan, 1969), . the external inertio-gravity waves are filtered out with essentially no effect on the internal modes. The stability criterion for the time step in the lake model can be based on the internal wave, which This increases the allowable time step is much slower than the surface wave. to a much greater value; this is preferable in a general circulation model. The exclusion of the kinematic surface variation makes...
