The Assembly and Boots and Saddles were sounded by Bugler E. Frank Smith on the battered bugle used by him with the regiment in 1864-6s from the Wilderness to Appomattox. The President, Major A. C. Houghton, was in the chair. In his opening address he said in part: Comrades of the 2nd Regiment and 25th Battery, I have seen times when you were lined up and looked more dangerous than now on many battlefields of the war. And although our meeting is of a different character--joyous and reminiscent--yet since the days of 1861-65, the battles we have fought in lifes campaigns have made us more than ever veteran fighters. In all these battles of life I know that the men of tried courage who stood shoulder to shoulder in the old days, have borne an honorable part, and God, in...
